Community Survey Project (CSP) by Zoology Students

As part of their field-based learning experience, students participated in a Neighborhood Study Program to understand the social and economic landscape of nearby communities. The activity involved interacting with residents, observing local conditions, and gathering information on various aspects of daily life. Through this experience, students developed a deeper appreciation of community dynamics and public welfare issues. The program enhanced their critical thinking, communication, and problem-solving skills. It also inspired them to become more socially conscious and responsible citizens. The initiative was an enriching blend of academic learning and community engagement.
